Welcome

This evening, the Indiana University School of Law — Bloomington is pleased to honor five distinguished graduates into the Academy of Law Alumni Fellows. This is the highest honor that our Law School bestows upon a graduate.

Those we recognize tonight were chosen by an anonymous committee of alumni who confronted the challenging task of selecting new members from a list of renowned and deserving alumni. It is a difficult undertaking, and we applaud them for their exceptional work.

We are thrilled to welcome Linda Chezem; V. William Hunt; George P. Smith, II; Milton O. Thompson; and Hon. John D. Tinder into the academy. We are also proud to recognize Michael “Mickey” S. Maurer as he is honored with the IU Foundation President’s Medal. In their own ways, each of these alumni bring distinction to this School, to the profession, and to their respective communities.

Sincere congratulations to each of our new Law Alumni Fellows.

Linda L. Chezem, Class of 1971

Linda Chezem has been an educator, influential judge, and public health issues advocate for more than 30 years, and her work continues to create educational outreach opportunities that connect health-related research, justice systems, and communities.

She is professor of youth development and agriculture education for the Purdue University College of Agriculture, an affiliated scholar of the Center for Public Health Law Partnerships at the University of Louisville School of Medicine, and enjoys adjunct appointments to the IU School of Medicine and the Indianapolis campuses of the IU School of Law and the Purdue School of Science.

Chezem also served 22 years as an esteemed, full-time judge in Indiana. Since her first appointment to the bench in a Lawrence County, Ind., trial court, she has served as a special judge in more than 300 cases serving 25 counties. Her jurisdictional experience at trial-court level ranged from traffic to felony murder, marriage dissolution, probate, juvenile, and countless civil and criminal dockets before her appointment to the Indiana Court of Appeals, Fourth District.

On the bench, she worked tirelessly to improve the lives of Indiana citizens. Her affiliations include the Indiana Judicial Conference Education Committee, the American Bar Association, and the National Council of Juvenile and Family Court Judges. Her fellowships with the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration and the Mid-America Regional Public Health Leadership Institute and tenure on the Morgan County, Ind., Board of Health include such achievements as better preparing the justice system for public health emergencies.

Chezem's public service also includes membership to the White House Conference for a Drug Free America Law Enforcement Advisory Committee, the Robert K. Greenleaf Center for Servant Leadership, New York's General Service Board for Alcoholics Anonymous, the National Alliance for Alcohol Research and Education Inc., and the Public Health Law Association.

She has been a three-time Sagamore of the Wabash honoree, with recognition from Governors Frank O'Bannon, Evan Bayh, and Robert D. Orr. In 1998, the Indiana General Assembly recognized her with a joint resolution of the Indiana House of Representatives and the Indiana Senate. She is a 2005 Lawrence County Pacesetter, a 2005 Lawrence County Woman of Excellence, and recipient of the Distinguished Alumni Service Award from Indiana University.

V. William Hunt, Class of 1969

Bill Hunt's business and legal acumen have carried him through a successful career, and his generosity overwhelms various business, civic, and educational organizations, including Indiana University.

Hunt, who earned both his BA and JD from IU and is a graduate of the Harvard Business School's Advanced Management Program, is chairman of Hunt Capital Partners LLC, a venture capital and consulting firm based in Indianapolis.

He is an active member of the Law School's Board of Visitors, the Kelley School of Business Dean's Advisory Council, and the IU Well House Society. Hunt serves a valuable role on the IU Foundation Board of Directors and on the advisory boards for the IU Research and Technology Corp., IUPUI, and IUPUC. He also serves as chairman of Advancing Indiana, IU's economic engagement initiative.

Hunt is Clarian Health Partners' chairman of the board and finance committee chair and sits on the boards of numerous for-profit and not-for-profit organizations including Brightpoint LLC, the world's largest cell phone distributor; Breeze Industrial Products; RollCoater Inc., North America's leading coil-coating company; My Health Care Manager LLC; Sentelligence LLC; and InProteo, a joint venture of Eli Lilly, IU, and Purdue University.

Prior to developing Hunt Capital Partners, he served as the vice chairman and president of ArvinMeritor Inc., a $7 billion, global supplier of a broad range of integrated systems, modules, and components for light vehicle, commercial truck, trailer, and specialty original equipment manufacturers and related aftermarkets, until 2001.

Before the Arvin Inc. merged with and Meritor Automotive Inc., which he served as president and vice chairman, Hunt was chairman and CEO of Arvin, a global manufacturer of automotive components, including exhaust systems, ride control products, and air, oil, and fuel filters.

He joined Arvin as Counsel in 1976, became vice president for administration, general counsel, and secretary in 1982; executive vice president in 1990; president in 1996; and CEO in 1998. A member of Arvin's board of directors from 1983, he was named chairman in 1999.

Previous to his time with Arvin-Meritor, Hunt practiced law in Indianapolis with the firm of Cadick Burns Duck & Neighbours and was labor relations and employment law counsel to TRW Automotive.

George P. Smith, II, Class of 1964

Upon graduating from Indiana Law, George P. Smith, II, stayed on and began his professional career as a Krannert Teaching Fellow. Subsequently, he earned an LLM from Columbia University and was awarded a Commonwealth Fellowship in Law, Science, and Medicine at the Yale Law School. As a scholar, his first published article appeared in 1965 in the Notre Dame Law Review. His current bibliography consists of 185 entries and includes 13 books. He has taught more than 5,000 students nationwide at Michigan, Notre Dame, Georgetown, George Washington, and Connecticut. Since 1977, he has been a professor at The Catholic University Law School in Washington, D.C.

Smith has received research appointments at more than 80 institutions including the Max Planck Institute, Germany; the Hoover Institution; Cambridge and Oxford Universities;

the medical schools at Chicago, Columbia, Duke, Northwestern, and IU; the Rockefeller Foundation; and the Yale, Princeton, and Vanderbilt Divinity Schools.

Beginning with a Fulbright Fellowship in 1984 to the University of New South Wales, Australia, Smith has returned regularly for teaching, lecturing, and research appointments throughout the continent — most recently at Macquarie University as Distinguished Visiting Professor and at Sydney University as the Parsons Visiting Professor.

His consultantships have included those with the House Committee on Science and Technology of Congress, New South Wales Law Reform Commission, and UNESCO. He is a life member of the American Law Institute.

Smith's professional career demonstrates a rich balance of teaching, scholarship, and public service — with significant work as the late Governor Winthrop Rockefeller's counsel on the environment and at the EPA headquarters in Washington, D.C., as a special counsel for legislation and intra-governmental affairs under William D. Ruckelshaus.

A citation of honor from IU's Institute for Advanced Study sums up Smith's life work, acknowledging "his path-breaking interdisciplinary research and writing on medical and biological issues as they relate to the norms of law and science." Smith is a recipient of the IU Distinguished Alumni Service Award and received an honorary LLD in 1998. A member of the Law School's Board of Visitors since 1998, he established a chair in Legal Research during the School's first capital campaign.

Milton O. Thompson, Class of 1979

Milton "Milt" O. Thompson is of counsel with the firm of Barnes & Thornburg and president and CEO of Grand Slam Companies, a sports, entertainment, and recreation management consulting firm. A former certified contract advisor with the NFL and NBA Players Association, he represented top professional athletes in all sports. He sits on the Indianapolis Indians Baseball Club board of directors and the board of Indiana Sports Corp. He currently hosts ESPN950's weekly radio show "Playing for Keeps," and he previously hosted television shows including: Hoosier Know It Alls," "Focus on Indianapolis Sports," and the public affairs show "Indiana Focus" on local station WNDY-TV.

Thompson's professional passions have translated to well-known work in community development, and sports and recreation-planning. He is a federal court-appointed trustee of the Indianapolis Foundation, and played a key role in negotiating the creation of the Central Indiana Community Foundation in 1997. He served as president and interim director of Big Brothers as it combined forces with Big Sisters to create Big Brothers and Big Sisters of Indiana.

His recreational management firm has helped cities throughout the country in such endeavors as Atlanta's National Black Arts Festival and Festival 2000 in San Francisco.

Thompson served as general counsel to the Pan American Games, negotiating with heads of state from around the world. He was also a member of committees for the NCAA Hall of Champions, the World Basketball Championships, the NCAA Final Four, the World Police and Fire Games, and the NCAA Track and Field Championships. He is a co-founder of the Indiana Amateur Baseball Association.

More than 15 of Thompson's volunteer affiliations, including the Law School, have honored his contributions. His most recent awards include the 2006 Heritage Award; recognition as one of Indianapolis Monthly's "Indiana Super Lawyers" in March 2005; and the 2004 Business & Philanthropy Award from the National Center for Black Philanthropy in Washington, D.C. A former first-team All-American baseball player at Wittenberg University where he earned his BA in 1976, he is a member of the Amateur Baseball Hall of Fame and has served as a Trustee for his alma mater since 1998.

His work features an invaluable commitment to Indiana University. He is a past president and 13-year member of the Law School's Board of Visitors and past president of the Law School Alumni Association. These efforts earned him the Law School's Distinguished Service Award in 1997. He also serves as advisor to the IU Kelley School of Business Sports and Entertainment Academy.

Hon. John D. Tinder, Class of 1975

As a judge for the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Indiana, John Daniel Tinder now presides in the same historic courthouse where his legal career began more than three decades earlier.

He could not have imagined his career path as a young assistant U.S. attorney. In that office and later in private practice, Tinder tried dozens of significant criminal and civil cases involving issues as varied as public corruption, fraud, embezzlement, and dangerous explosives violations. He served as a public defender in a Marion County criminal court and, later, as Chief Trial Deputy for the Marion County Prosecutor's Office.

This significant litigation experience motivated President Ronald Reagan to appoint Tinder as U.S. Attorney for the Southern District of Indiana in 1984. In that post, he supervised noteworthy prosecutions, represented the government and its agencies in civil litigation in the district and appellate courts, and served as vice chairman of the Attorney General's Advisory Committee. He has since served as a district judge in the Southern District of Indiana, of which he will become chief judge in January 2008. During his 20 years on that court, he also served on the Automation and Technology and Court Security Committees of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

Tinder is committed to public service and the law. In addition to charitable activities as a volunteer for the Boys and Girls Clubs, the Alzheimer's Association of Central Indiana, and the Cathedral Soup Kitchen, he remains actively loyal to the Law School, serving terms on the Board of Visitors and on two dean search committees.

His public work knows no borders. He devotes significant time to global legal education programs in England and the former Yugoslavia that tackle important legal and ethical issues and has hosted judges and lawyers from South Korea, Taiwan, China, Japan, Liberia, Russia, and other former Soviet Republics for meetings on similar topics. Domestically, Tinder is an emeritus member of the Sagamore American Inn of Court and current vice president of the Indianapolis Bar Association.

He was also an adjunct professor of trial advocacy at the IU School of Law — Indianapolis as well as a faculty member for numerous trial skill training programs of the National Institute of Trial Advocacy and the U.S. Attorney General's Advocacy Institute.

Michael S. Maurer, Class of 1967

Michael "Mickey" S. Maurer's dynamic career as an attorney and entrepreneur includes cable television, film production, radio broadcasting, newspaper publishing, government service, and banking. An Indianapolis native, he graduated from North Central High School and attended the University of Colorado before attending Indiana Law, where he wrote and edited for the Indiana Law Journal.

Maurer was a pioneer in the initial development and operations of cable television systems, throughout Indiana and Michigan. Admitted to both the New York and Indiana bars, Maurer enjoyed a 20-year career as a practicing attorney. He is chairman of the board of IBJ Corp.; owner and publisher of the Indianapolis Business Journal, Court and Commercial Record, and Indiana Lawyer; and chairman of the board for The National Bank of Indianapolis.

For more than 30 years, Maurer's support of the IU Foundation and the Law School has been substantial. His service, loyalty, and leadership earned him a place in the Academy of Law Alumni Fellows. He received the IU Distinguished Alumni Service Award in 2001.

His contributions as national chairman of the Law School's first capital campaign and as a member of the Ad-Hoc Campaign Committee for the current Matching the Promise Campaign help Indiana Law continue a strong tradition.

IU is fortunate to be among many organizations — civic, educational, and philanthropic — that benefit from Maurer's generous leadership. He established Mickey's Camp, a charitable endeavor that has raised more than $600,000 for central Indiana charities and recently completed a two-year Governor's appointment as president of the Indiana Economic Development Corp. Secretary of Commerce. His many awards include the 2006 Columbia Club Benjamin Harrison Medallion and the Charles L. Whister Award from the Greater Indianapolis Progress Committee.

In addition to his many professional and philanthropic endeavors, Maurer's hobbies include skiing, biking, wood-working, and award-winning underwater photography. He is a frequent contributor to the New York Times crossword puzzle, and in 1999, he climbed to the summit of Mt. Kilimanjaro, Africa's highest peak.
